WEIGHT OF ALIBI WITH JURY CRUX IN SCHOULTZ CASE

Insults were offered by a man who was seated on concrete coping, on Waldman boulevard, just off Jefferson avenue, at the rear of Dr. M. B. Herman's home. The girls, each of whom was alone at the time she was insulted, were on their way to Central high school at the time the insults were offered. The hour of the insults was fixed at 3:20 to 3:40 o'clock in each case.

Five Identifications.

Five witnesses, all Central high students, positively identified "Dr." Schoultz as the man who offered the insults. Four of the witnesses were 16-year-old girls, two of them the girls who were insulted. The other witness was a 16-year-old boy.

The two specific insults offered, out of which grew the indictments of "Dr." Schoultz, had been preceded by many others of like nature. Most of them occurred near the Central high school building. In some cases the girls were in the building, in some cases they were on the grounds. On occasions, like the two instances, innocent exposure was made by a man. In the two instances, the man was guilty of both insulting actions and insulting words.

One business man, who knew "Dr." Schoultz well, testified that he had seen him seated on the concrete coping from which the insults were offered, about two weeks or 10 days before the girls were insulted.

Two principals of Central high school testified that he had caught "Dr." Schoultz in the basement of the high school building, near the locker and dressing rooms of the girls students. Schoultz identified himself, and was told that hereafter he must get a pass to visit the building.

On another occasion, the principal testified, he had, from his office window, seen Schoultz enter the school grounds, walk to the door as if to come in, look up and apparently seeing the principal watching him, turn and leave the grounds.

Warning to three nurses who studied medical gymnast art from Schoultz daily, never to go to his office except in two or three cases, also was given, but no reason for their physician-employers' warning was introduced. The physician was not called to the stand.

These are the outstanding features of the state's side of the case against "Dr." Schoultz. To controvert this testimony, the defense offered an alibi and a "double" angle.

The defense sought to show that "Dr." Schoultz was engaged daily between the hours of 8 and 9 o'clock, in instructing the three nurses in Schoultz's calling—that of medical gymnast. It was contended that he missed classes on seven days during April, but that none of these dates on which classes were held, was April 17 or 23, the dates the girls were insulted.

The three nurses, who logically should have been defense witnesses, were named only in rebuttal by the state. Each stated that she could not swear that she attended classes on April 17 and 23. This lapse of memory clouded what would have been a perfect, indisputable alibi for the defense.

Calendar Main Factor.

The office women employed by the masseur testified that he had kept a memorandum on which the dates classes were held were marked. It was developed that this memorandum had been stolen from her desk. But she insisted that she recalled the fact that classes were held on the two days in question, and she fixed the dates in her mind because of two things—the death of her father, which occurred on April 18, and the fact that "Dr." Schoultz had given her a bill to collect on the morning of April 23.

One of the nurses kept a record of the days on which they missed classes, and days on which they attended. The days missed were recorded by a penciled ring about the date on a calendar in her office, on the floor above "Dr." Schoultz's office in the Exchange building.

That calendar, another vital feature in the alibi, is said to have blown out of the window on the day of the trial.

What is claimed to be made an appearance in the trial on the last day, Schoultz said a pencil ring about the date on the calendar, which he found it on the next door room.

But the young woman who kept the ringed record on the calendar would not identify the penciled markings as being made by her, although she did identify the calendar.

jury of the pencil marks on the calendar featured this portion of the testimony. The nurse said she thought there were more days missed than the marks showed. No evidence of erasure was visible on the calendar to the eyes of a reporter. The jury's opinion will not be known until the verdict is returned.

The woman detective testified that she had entered the case at the instance of a minister, prospective father-in-law of the accused. Testimony of the three nurses gave their opinion that the woman detective, who brought affidavits to sign to their office, was making an effort to influence them. This is a matter also for the jury's consideration.

A deposition from a young woman patient of Dr. Schoultz was read. It she stated that she had talked to him over the telephone on the morning of April 17, between 8 and 9 o'clock. He was at his office at the time.

Another patient testified that she had a daily engagement at Schoultz's office, starting at 9 o'clock and lasting until 9:45 or 9:50. She said she saw the three nurses leaving after the lessons on the mornings of both April 17 and April 23, the days of the insults to the high school girls.

Testimony of other girl and woman witnesses to the effect that they had been grossly insulted by a man who looked greatly like "Dr." Schoultz, but who they said was not Schoultz, also was introduced. One girl, seeing Schoultz in an automobile, thought he was the man who insulted her, but when he stepped from the machine and stood up she saw that he was a great deal taller than the man who insulted her.

A mature woman testified that when she saw Schoultz's picture in the newspaper she identified it as that of a man who had insulted her some time before. But the same man insulted her again, after Schoultz had been arrested and while he still was in jail, waiting for bond. She said the defendant was taller than the man who insulted her, but looked a great deal like him.

Much other testimony was introduced during the course of the trial, but the salient features are included in the facts recited.

Possible Punishment.
Because of the evident tangle, because of the horrible nature of the charges, and because of the alibi and "double" angle, it is believed the arguments of lawyers will contest decision in the mind of each individual juror. Those decisions are all one who the result will be acquittal or conviction for "Dr." Schoultz. If some incline one way and some another the result will be a mistrial.

The case on which Schoultz was tried was the insult of April 23. He is under indictment, charged with being guilty of the insult of April 17. In addition he faces two misdemeanor indictments charging indecent exposure of person. If found guilty of attempting to violate the law of consent, Schoultz faces a sentence of one to five years. Eleven months and 23 days in the limit on a misdemeanor, should he be found guilty.

Some attorneys contend that, even should the jury return an adverse verdict for Schoultz, a new trial either would have to be granted or the case would be reversed, for the reason that the testimony was offered by the state to the effect that the man who insulted the girls placed his hands upon them. They claim such an overt act is necessary to complete the attempt to violate the age of consent law. Testimony showed that the man who insulted the two girls did so by making certain exposures and by words.
